The FIU Master of Health Services Administration program prepares students for executive leadership positions in healthcare organizations, with a focus on managing the human and fiscal resources to deliver effective health services. Gain the mastery to plan, direct and coordinate medical and health services, and learn how to create and implement policy and procedures, hire and supervise staff, control finances, and collaborate with other healthcare managers. Graduates will emerge with the tools and knowledge necessary to manage teams and departments, and strategically develop balanced solutions that benefit healthcare organizations and patient care and access. Earn your master’s degree in 24 months through our fully online or hybrid program.
