FIU’s fully online Bachelor of Arts in Spanish will allow students to connect with other countries and cultures and learn the second-most important language in the United States. In fact, Spanish is the second most spoken language in the world after Chinese, with roughly 400 million native speakers. It is the national language of 20 countries, including 19 in the Western Hemisphere. The most populous Spanish-speaking countries are Mexico, Spain, Argentina, and Colombia, and if you speak both English and Spanish you can communicate with three quarters of a billion people throughout the world.

The Spanish major progresses from courses in basic language skills through intermediate and advanced courses in conversation, grammar, composition and linguistics to the study of the masterpieces of Spanish and Spanish-American literature, representative Hispanic films, and the historical and contemporary civilizations of Spain and Latin America. Applied Spanish courses in business Spanish and specialized Spanish vocabulary for various professions are also offered. Students are prepared to pursue advanced studies in Spanish at the graduate level or to be ready for employment after completion of their bachelor’s degree.
