FIU Online
Florida International University
FIU Online’s Bachelor of Science in Early Childhood Education is a fully online program that focuses on learning and development during the early childhood years. The undergraduate degree addresses the development of the whole child. You’ll learn about cognitive, language and social/emotional development of young children, as well as general and early education theory and practices.

Your undergraduate degree will prepare you for careers in childcare, child development, and early education for children from birth to five years of age. FIU’s meaningful and engaging curriculum includes courses on classroom management, development, assessment techniques, family engagement, children with special needs, cultural diversity and literacy development.
